What to Look for in a High School

Before you start making phone calls, collecting application packets, or visiting schools, it is important to sit down and decide what is most important to you when choosing a school. Discuss this with your family and with people you trust. Then decide what your priorities are, and look for a school that meets them.

Five important factors to consider when choosing a school are: Academics, Values, Discipline, Location, and Special Features.

We offer the following list of questions to consider as you evaluate different high schools. Remember, only you and your family can decide the right answer to these questions, and determine which questions are most important.

Academics

- How advanced are the classes? Will I be challenged? How much “catching up” will I have to do (if any)? Are different levels available for certain subjects within the same grade?
- How much homework do the teachers assign? How do the teachers keep the students accountable for completing their homework?
- What teaching methods are emphasized at this school? Do students spend a lot of time doing hands-on activities? Does the school stress basic skills? Is there more emphasis on group learning or individual achievement? Are the teaching methods age-appropriate? What kinds of technology do they use?
- How do the classrooms feel? Are the teachers friendly and interesting? Are the teachers qualified to teach their subject matter? Do students seem eager to learn? Do they seem to enjoy their classes and like their teachers? Does the classroom seem to be a pleasant place for your child to spend several hours a day?
- How important are grades? How difficult is the grading system? Does the school use letter grades? Is effort factored into grades, assessed separately, or not accounted for on report cards?

Academics

- Is this school associated with a church, denomination, or religion? Is the religious aspect emphasized, or is it more of a historical association?
- What will the teachers teach about what is right or wrong? Does this agree with our family values?
- Does the school teach sex education? What is the content of those courses?

Discipline

- What are the rules for behavior at this school? Are there rules about teasing and verbal abuse? Rules about completing homework? Tardiness and absenteeism? Dress code? Using foul language? Pushing, hitting, or other physical violence or rough-housing? Use or possession of controlled substances?
- What happens when a student breaks the rules or causes a problem in the classroom? Does the teacher assign extra work? Take away privileges? Assign detentions during recess, or before or after school? Give in-school or out-of-school suspensions?

Discipline

- Do the parents and teachers communicate regularly about the child's progress and/or problems? Do the teachers respect parents' opinions and insights? Will they consider parents' suggestions?
- Does the teacher seem to be in control of the classroom and very aware of what the students are doing? Are discipline problems rare?

Location

- How long will it take to travel from home to the school?
From work?
- Does the school provide transportation?
- Will classmates and friends live in the same neighborhood, or far away?

Applying to Private School

A private school is a category of schools that are outside the school district. Schools charge tuition and are able to meet the demands of the state learning objectives using curriculum that is different than the standardized curriculum offered in public schools.

Independent Schools

A type of private school with NO religious affiliation.

Parochial Schools

A type of private school that is affiliated with a certain church or parish.

When considering private school, it is important you make a list of qualities that you are seeking in a new school environment. This way you know what to look for in a private school because they are all very different.

Some Ideas to Consider:

- Smaller class size
- More challenging curriculum
- Hands-on/Project-based learning curriculum

Applying to Private School

- Innovative technology
- Language classes – Mandarin or Spanish
- Arts programs
- Sports programs
